Brevillier's CRETACOLOR®

Cretacolor, Vienna. A Passion For Pencils.

Art Material

CRETACOLOR. A brand with tradition, passion and personality.

With the CRETACOLOR brand Brevillier Urban & Sachs combines the ambition of two individualists: Carl Brevillier and Hans Wolfgang Hromatka.

Carl Brevillier

Hans Wolfgang Hromatka

In 1863, the manufacturer Carl Brevillier founded the Zeus pencil factory in Vienna, which made writing and drawing accessible to a large public. The assets for this came from the industrial production of screws and railroad wagons. But Carl Brevillier found his true calling in art. Since the writing instruments of the time, such as pens and pencils, were mainly made by hand and were mostly of poor quality and very expensive, his aim was to create high-quality tools for people who write or draw. This ultimately also made it possible to inspire those people with an interest in art who had previously been unable to afford art materials. This was another important contribution to the development of the modern Brevillier pencil.

Since the end of the 1990s, Hans Wolfgang Hromatka has continued the tradition of this historic brand under the name CRETACOLOR. By purchasing the Hirm pencil factory in 1996, the passionate collector of old pencils was able to combine his passion and his field of work for the first time and thus prevent the closure of the company. CRETACOLOR has gradually developed into one of the premium brands for high-quality artist products worldwide.

With the takeover of Brevillier-Urban in 2008, the company that upheld the tradition of Carl Brevillier's old pencil factory, Hans Wolfgang Hromatka acquired the know-how to produce artist pencils even more efficiently. At his request, the Brevillier name was integrated into the CRETACOLOR brand logo. And the company Brevillier Urban & Sachs was born.

CRETACOLOR.

A brand with a sense of sustainability.

Tradition is a high priority at CRETACOLOR. Naturally in combination with sustainable production, innovative technology and creative diversity.

The brand thus appeals to all those artists who are looking for the genuine, haptic feeling of drawing, sketching and watercoloring – and, of course, with their fingers on the pulse of the times.

Sustainable production

Sustainability and environmental protection have always played a key role at CRETACOLOR. This means that only 100% sustainable green electricity from Austria is used. This mainly comes from hydroelectric and wind power. In this way, Brevillier Urban & Sachs contributes to reducing emissions in the fight against climate change.

In the interests of sustainable waste management, the wood waste generated during pencil production is used as heat and process energy for production.

The company also processes FSC® certified wood. The FSC® is committed to promoting sustainable forestry worldwide. The FSC® helps to preserve forests for future generations and protects the interests of people and animals who live in or from these forests.
